October 8 is Thanksgiving Day and it's also the day I'll be giving a radio talk called "What's for Lunch" over CKUA at 12:45 p.m.

Mrs. Wise and the lunch box—The Wise children like milk puddings and Mrs. Wise often includes them in the lunch box. She has discovered too that she can get a double amount of milk in this way by adding some powdered milk, whole or skim, to her recipes, in addition to the fresh milk.

To save time she makes up a pudding mix or plain cornstarch pudding or blanc mange from which she can make a variety of tasty desserts. Here is her recipe for pudding mix:

2 cups powdered skim milk
3/4 cup cornstarch
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/4 teaspoons salt

She mixes this together thoroughly, and stores it in a tight container in a cool place. To make vanilla mudding she uses 2/3 cup of mix to 2 cups of fresh milk, makes a paste of the mix with a little of the cold milk, adds this to the remaining milk which has been scalded, stirring until it thickens. She covers and cooks this for twenty minutes then adds a tablespoon of butter and a teaspoon of vanilla and pours into molds or cups to cool.

A zipper should be closed when you wash a garment. Bet you all know that.

Next week's question: How can you make your washing and ironing easier.

Wedding Bells

A wedding was solemnized in Zion Lutheran Church, Saskatoon, when Anna Gertrude, elder daughter of Mrs. John O. Farden of Saskatoon, formerly of Macerons, Sask., and the late Mr. Farden, was married to Harold Curtis, only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Satre of Irma, Alta. The ceremony was performed by Pastor J. B. Stolee of Birch Hills, Sask.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Otto Farden. Her gown of white satin featured a yoke of net, gathered skirt, and a full train. The fingertip veil was held in place with a bridal crown, and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Randi Nilsen, matron-of-honor, wore a yellow gown of nylon net over taffeta, and the bridesmaids, Misses Avis Satre and Jo Almas, wore blue taffeta and pink nylon marquisette over taffeta respectively. They had matching headresses and carried bouquets of roses and carnations.

Rev. L. T. Nilsen of Medstead, Sask., attended the groom and ushers were R. Erickson and L. Likness. The organist was Mrs. M. Dale and the soloist Mrs. O. K. Storaasli. A reception followed in the church parlors.

Both bride and groom are graduates in arts from the U. of Sask., and the bride is also a graduate of Saskatoon City Hospital School of Nursing. They will make their home in Saskatoon, where the groom is continuing studies at the Lutheran Theological Seminary.

Prairie Industries

FOR MANY YEARS there has been interest in the prospects of establishing industries on the prairies. Almost all the manufactured goods used by the people there are shipped from Eastern Canada or the United States and the people in the West have had included in the prices which they pay, shipping charges from distant points and in the case of American goods, tariff charges as well. There has been strong argument in favor of eliminating these extra costs by manufacturing articles close to the points at which they are to be consumed.

Marketing Is One Problem

In a recent issue of the magazine "Chemistry in Canada" the subject of industrial developments on the prairies is discussed at some length. Dr. H. H. Saunders, director of the Information Service of the National Research Council is one of the writers contributing to the discussion and he suggests some interesting points in connection with the possibilities for marketing goods manufactured on the prairies. He raises the question frequently brought forward in this connection, regarding the feasibility of manufacturing goods for which the raw materials must be brought a great distance. In such circumstances it is usually cheaper to transport the finished article.

Interest In New Markets

It is also pointed out that many manufacturing plants operating at full capacity would produce more goods than would be required in the immediate area, and the manufacturer would have to sell the surplus on other markets, either in Eastern Canada or abroad. In view of the expansion which is taking place in many parts of the West, a number of industries are looking with interest to this increasing market, where there is demand for all types of household supplies, industrial equipment and other services. Power, transportation, and availability of raw materials are all factors which come under consideration when a new industry is to be established, but there is evidence that there may be considerable progress in the industrial development of the West in the next few years.

Many To Sail For Europe In '52

EDMONTON.—Hundreds of bookings already have been made for Atlantic sailings in the summer of 1952, according to Ron W. Greene, of Winnipeg, general passenger agent for Canadian Pacific Steamships, during a visit to Edmonton recently. Mr. Greene said cross-Atlantic business this summer had been heavy but now has commenced to ease, leaving space available for practically all sailings. One of the big drawing cards has been the Festival of Britain.

Next year, the eucharistic congress in Spain probably will be one of the main European events to attract visitors from Canada, he said.

SOUVENIR OF SUMMER
Did you lose a silver feather from your wing, humming-bird,
As you hovered o'er the rose blossoms on my window sill?
Did you leave a note, a souvenir of a summer day
When the flowers gave their sweet perfume, and the air was hot and still?
I found the smallest silver plume that I had ever seen
Resting beneath a rose bloom when you flew down away.
I will keep it to remind me when the world is bound with frost
Of humming birds, some rose blossoms and a quiet summer's day.

CINNAMON BUNS

Measure into large bowl, 1 c. lukewarm water, 2 tps. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 2 envelopes Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 min., THEN stir well. Scald 4 c. milk and stir in 1/2 c. granulated sugar, 1/2 tsp. salt, 6 ts. shortening; cool to lukewarm. Add to yeast mixture and stir in 2 well-beaten eggs. Stir in 3 c. once-sifted bread flour; beat until smooth. Work in 3 c. more once-sifted bread flour. Knead until smooth and elastic; place in greased bowl; brush top with melted butter or shortening. Cover and set in warm place, free from draft. Let rise until doubled in bulk. While dough is rising, combine 1/2 c. brown sugar (lightly pressed down), 1 tsp. ground cinnamon, 1 c. washed and dried seedless raisins. Punch down dough and divide into 2 equal portions; form into smooth balls. Roll each piece into an oblong 1/4" thick and 16" long; loosen dough. Brush with melted butter or margarine. Sprinkle with raisin mixture. Beginning at a long end, roll up each piece loosely, like a jelly roll. Cut into 1" slices. Place just touching each other, a cut-side up, in greased 17" round layer-cake pans (or other shallow pans). Grease tops. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in moderate oven, 350°, 20-25 minutes. Serve hot, or reheated.

Funny and Otherwise

Peter: "A ghastly thing occurred this morning—I ran over your father in my new car!"
Sheila: "Good gracious! What happened?"
Peter: "Nothing serious, thank goodness. Just a beat mugged and the paint a bit scratched!"
Student in Art Class: "That, sir, is a cow grazing."
Fuzzled Art Teacher: "Indeed? Where is the grass?"
Student: "The cow has eaten it."
Art Teacher: "But where is the cow?"
Student: "You don't think she'd be silly enough to stay there after she'd eaten all the grass, do you?"

"You might stay at home a little bit more," complained the wife of the businessman. "You are oversteering on playing golf."

"I know my dear," replied lighly, "but you know the doctor told me to live on greens as much as possible."

The talkative lady was telling her husband about the bad manners of an acquaintance who had recently paid her a visit.

"If that woman yawned once while I was talking to her," she said, "she yawned 11 times."

"Perhaps she wasn't yawning, dear," the husband said, "maybe she wanted to say something."

The hot gossipier was getting excited.
"We have got the Devil in chains at last," he cried. Then, after a pause, "But don't flatter yourselves; he can still reach you people in the front pew and even you young fellows at the back of the gallery."

Came a voice from the gallery: "Well, the blighter might as well be loose!"

Lung Specialist: "A man who sings at the top of his voice for an hour a day won't be troubled by chest complaints in his old age."
Pre-Med: "He probably won't even be troubled by old age."

President: "Where's the cashier?"
Manager: "Gone to the races."

President: "Gone to the races in business hours?"
Manager: "Yes, sir, it's his last chance of making the books balance."

Customer: "I'd like to see something cheap in a straw hat."
Salesman: "Certainly, sir. Try this one on, sir, and the mirror's on your left."

REGGY

Cow Now Horse O.K. To Shoot

WASHINGTON.—The cow became a horse, and now it's quite all right to shoot the beast. It's a tale of mystic India, told in testimony at Senate hearings on the foreign aid bill.

A big wild animal of the antelope family and known as the "nehil gae" was causing extensive damage to crops in the field. But the farmers would not harm it because "nehil gae" means "blue cow," and the cow is sacred to the Hindu.

So the Indian government has changed the name to "nehil goa"—which means "blue horse." Horses are not sacred, and so now the beast can be killed to protect the crops of food-short India.

Got Journalistic Experience The Hard Way

Eric Humphries Becomes Editor Of Weekly Paper In Japanese Prison Camp

CALGARY.—Eric Humphries got his journalistic experience the hard way.

Humphries, 31, now a public relations official with the Canadian National Railway in London, England, started writing in a Japanese prison camp in Hava during the Second World War.

He told the story while in Calgary during a nine-week tour of C.N.R. offices across Canada.

He was a prisoner-of-war in a Japanese camp at Batavia early in the war. The Japanese provided news bulletins of a sort for the prisoners, but they were written in such bad English that they were practically unintelligible. Humphries got the idea of editing and publishing the news himself from official releases.

He convinced the Japanese authorities this was a good idea, and with the help of a fellow prisoner and a typewriter borrowed from the Japanese he put out a single-sheet weekly paper for nearly three years.

"We found out later that the news we got from the Japs" was highly-colored propaganda," he said. "But at least it gave the boys an idea of where the fighting was going on."

Wood Carving Is Hobby Of Immigrant

WINNIPEG.—Knut Holmgren, for many years a seaman in the Swedish Merchant Navy, has been a carpenter since coming to Canada three months ago but he would like to devote all his time to wood carving.

His latest project, which he will do in spare time, is a five-foot model in Canada wood of a 19th-century sailing ship used for carrying wheat from Australia and now a training ship for Sweden's navy.

Asked why he left the sea, Holmgren said:

"I have had enough travelling. Canada's climate is similar to that of Sweden. And then there's Mrs. Holmgren's decision: 'I don't want a man who is always at sea.' We've spent only 13 of 20 years of married life together."

Rescued U.S. Fisherman Tells Of Bush Ordeal

Says Plane For Sale, Wife Won't Let Me Keep It

Dr. John Tusche, Shobogyan, Wis., who with Miles Eikenberger, Plymouth, Minn., was recently rescued after being marooned for 29 days in northern Saskatchewan wilderness, tells of his harrowing experiences: "The Pals Man—My plane is for sale. I'm sure my wife won't let me keep it after all this trouble. That is my last aircraft."

We became lost on the first day of our flight from Lac La Ronge in my Fairchild plane. We found out we were above the tree line and into the Northwest Territories, about 150 miles north of where we were found. The thing that put off was the shift in the winds and the magnetic disturbances. Once during that flight, I pointed the plane at a large lake and my compass went all the way around.

The black flies in that north country almost killed us although we had repellent and it was effective. At one time I counted 266 bites on myself and Miles. Eikenberger must have suffered four or five times that many. Those black flies were so thick and they bit hard.

We had a good tent that kept the flies out. But during the nights it turned so cold that even with our Arctic equipment and sleeping bags we couldn't sleep well.

It was so cold that the water in our cooking pots was thick ice in the mornings.

We had plenty of food because we had brought along eight weeks supply in the plane, but during the last two weeks we lived off fish and berries because we wanted to conserve food in the event we had to walk out. Fortunately we never did.

The fishing in the lake was good. We caught lake and northern trout at will. But I'm fed up with a fish diet now. We ate trout every day. We kept a diary of the events that occurred and I included in it a personal message of farewell to my wife and family.

The mental anguish we suffered at the thought of our families was really the worst of our troubles. We prayed hard and often that we would be found. I have slipped from the church in recent years, but I'm back in it now.

Miles celebrated his 52nd birthday on Aug. 28. We should have observed it on the 27th, but somehow we lost track of two days.

For his special birthday supper we tried to shoot the only grouse we had seen in the northern island, but we had no luck.

He had fish again for his birthday. We really entertained little hope of being found because we realized that we were much farther north than we had intended to go.

New Potash Finds In Sask.

REGINA.—Two discoveries of potash in a salt bed under the Saskatchewan plains were reported by Hon. J. H. Brockelbank, resources minister.

Both discoveries were in wells drilled by the Schojo Petroleum company in the Watrous area, about 60 miles southeast of Saskatoon. The two new seams were discovered at a depth of 3,000 feet but neither is thick enough to be mined.

However, Mr. Brockelbank said, they indicate a wider distribution of potash throughout the province.

CAUTION :: All The Business In The World Doesn't Make Up For The Life Of One Kid.

By RUSSELL WILSEY

MR. WRIGHT eased up to the prominent "STOP" sign at the cross-roads, then shot his car past it without changing gears. Beside him Mr. Thornton watched the unwinding ribbon of the road.

"You'll take care of that order as soon as possible, Mr. Wright?" Mr. Thornton asked, removing his large cigar from his mouth to do so.

"Yes, sir," Mr. Wright answered, "first thing in the morning."

They drove in silence for a few minutes, then Mr. Thornton remarked, "How's your wife? She had some sort of accident lately, didn't she?"

"Uh huh, but she's fine now. Too bad you couldn't stay for dinner to night. My boy's doing pretty well, too. Got a new position. I thought he might come into the business with me, but he . . ."

Mr. Thornton dropped his eyes to his wristwatch. "Eleven-thirty!" he snapped. "What time did you say that train left?"

"Eleven-fifty-eight," Mr. Wright answered, frowning himself as he saw the deep ridges in his companion's brow.

"Well, I don't want to miss that train," Mr. Thornton said quickly. "I've got an important meeting in Deven's. It wouldn't pay me to miss it."

Mr. Wright's answer was to hurry along a little faster. The trees and grass at the side of the road blurred into a line of green.

They whipped past a side road and almost instantly a motorcycle roared out after them.

For a moment Mr. Wright considered trying to escape, but the "cycle was coming too fast. He slowed the coupe and brought it to a stop by the side of the road.

The motorcycle drew up to the coupe and out in front of it. The tall, trim policeman alighted his engine, then dismounted and walked towards the car.

"If you're saving somebody's life, pop," the cop said sarcastically, "let's go. But if you were hitting sixty-five miles an hour just 'cause you felt like it, I'm afraid I'm going to have to give you a ticket."

"Now listen here . . ." Mr. Wright started heatedly.

"Take it easy. Let's see your 'license'."

Reluctantly Mr. Wright held out his key case.

"The registration papers in here?" the cop asked. Mr. Wright nodded.

Unsnapping the inside pocket of the case, he removed the papers, eyed Mr. Wright and the physical description on his license, then stroled to the front of the car to check the plates with the registration.

In the car Mr. Thornton glanced at his watch and turned to glare at the policeman.

"We'll never make that train if this goes on all day. What's the matter, Wright, can't you slip that kid some cash and get us out of here?"

"An afraid not."

The cop returned, lifted one foot to the running board, and opened a leather-covered pad on his knee. "All right, Mr. Alan E. Wright," he said, without looking up from his pad, "I'll have a little present for you in a moment, if you'll just be patient."

Mr. Thornton squirmed in his seat. "Listen, young man, why don't . . ."

The policeman looked up. "What's your name?" he asked, calmly surveying Mr. Thornton.

"Thornton, Richard Thornton. I'm from Deven's City, and . . ."

"What are you doing out here?" the cop broke in.

"I had some business with Mr. Wright. What business is it of yours?"

"Just curious," the cop answered evenly.

"Well, I've got to catch a train in ten minutes. I'm a busy man, and I can't spend valuable time sitting way out here in the . . . the . . . the country."

Turning to Mr. Wright, the cop went on, "Listen, Mr. Wright, I suppose this guy means a lot of business to you, so you're willing to break the speed limit to help him get his train. Maybe you didn't realize a lot of your neighbors live around here. The kids are supposed to keep off this particular highway, but sometimes they forget. All the business in the world doesn't make up for the life of one kid, Mr. Wright."

He ripped out the ticket and passed it in to Mr. Wright, along with his key case.

"Okay, pop. Just use your head the next time."

Folding his pad up and stuffing it into one of his pockets, the cop stroled to his motorcycle. The "cycle's engine barked into life and the cop sped off in the opposite direction.

Mr. Wright started his own engine and the coupe continued to the railroad station, at a decidedly lower speed.

"Pop!" Mr. Thornton snarled in a peevish outburst. "Why that fresh, young kid!"

Mr. Wright laughed ruefully. "Well, in my case it wasn't too bad. That was Ted, my son."

Horses Sold "Dirt Cheap" At Coast

VANCOUVER.—Top thoroughbreds sold for low prices at the first annual dispersal auction of the Lavender Stock Farms.

Two Overdrive fillies, both greys like their old man, brought the best prices. Howe, Thomas and Howe got one for $650, highest bid of the day, and the other went to Dr. H. R. Ross for $550.

A once-proud stallion, Royal Reigh, was sold for $50. Other stallions went for little, too, Bob's Way bringing $40; Ted Lewis $100 and Black Lane $40.

There were some real bargains among the mares. All had sucklings and had been bred back.

So Clay Puett, in buying Little Pine and Phatima for $375, actually bought six horses. 2800

Family Gathering
